THE SCHOOL GARDEN PROJECT

When the Grade Nine learners at Mwangaza Junior School noticed that part of their school compound was lying idle, they proposed turning it into a vegetable garden. Their teacher, Ms. Achieng, asked them to investigate what the project would require before beginning the work. The learners formed groups and listed the tasks: clearing the plot, preparing the soil, obtaining seeds, watering the crops and keeping records of growth.

The class consulted the school caretaker, who advised them to make raised beds because the ground became waterlogged after heavy rain. They also collected dry leaves and animal manure to prepare compost. Instead of applying too much water at once, the learners agreed to water the seedlings gently in the morning. Each group was assigned a duty, and a weekly rota was displayed on the classroom noticeboard.

At first, some seedlings wilted because they were exposed to strong afternoon sunshine. The learners discussed the problem and used locally available materials to provide temporary shade. They recorded the changes they observed and shared their findings during a class presentation. After several weeks, the garden produced vegetables that were used in the school kitchen. The project taught the learners that cooperation, careful planning and patience can turn a simple idea into a useful achievement.
